The Cuban mayor, a Yale-marinated journalist, the black police chief, a Haitian professor whose ambitions to be French are thwarted by his Creole-spouting son, the clueless baying art-buyers and an Anglo billionaire porn addict all come up for scrutiny in Tom Wolfes high-energy, scrupulous and hilarious reckoning with our times. Revue de presse PRAISE FOR TOM WOLFE: Bonfire of the Vanities (1987): "A big, bitter, funny, craftily plotted book that grabs you by the lapels and won't let go." New York Times Book Review "A superb human comedy and the first novel ever to get contemporary New York, in all its arrogance and shame and heterogeneity and insularity, exactly right." Washington Post Book World A Man in Full (1998): "The novel contains passages as powerful and as beautiful as anything written--not merely by contemporary American novelists but by any American novelist.... The book is as funny as anything Wolfe has ever written; at the same time it is also deeply, strangely affecting." New York Times Book Review I Am Charlotte Simmons (2004): "Wolfe is one of the greatest literary stylists and social observers of our much observed postmodern era.... A rich, wise, absorbing, and irresistible novel." Lev Grossman, Time "Wolfe's dialogue is some of the finest in literature, not just fast but deep. He hears the cacophony of our modern lives." Los Angeles Times "Brilliant... I couldn't stop reading it.... Tom Wolfe can make words dance and sing and perform circus tricks, he can make the reader sigh with pleasure." Michael Dirda, Washington Post Presentation de l'auteur As the police boat speeds across Miami's Biscayne Bay, the scene is set for Officer Nestor Camacho's great moment of heroism.
